Wang Gang

Wang Gang holds a Master's Degree in Food Safety from China Agricultural University. His career spans over three decades, starting as the Technical Head of a state-owned enterprise in China before joining Nestlé and leading the QA department of BAMA, where he served reputable clients such as McDonald's, Walmart, Subway and Papa John's. Currently, Wang is the Global Quality and Food Safety Director for Dairy and Plant-Based Beverages at The Coca-Cola Company, where he has been working for 14 years.

Wang's deep-seated knowledge spans various food categories, including milk powder, infant cereals, condensed, evaporated and UHT milk, instant noodles, condiments, ice cream, chocolate, sugar confectionery, bakery and frozen dough, beverages, bottled spring water and canned foods. His expertise extends to management systems throughout the supply chain, focusing on quality and food safety.

A pro at implementing GMP and HACCP, Wang is also skilled in areas such as hygienic engineering design, environmental microbiology monitoring, cleaning and sanitation, validation of thermal and aseptic process. He also displays competence in dairy cattle animal health and welfare, with a strong focus on agricultural sustainability.
